Dear Bunge and Corn Products Colleagues,

We are pleased to report that planning for the combination of our two companies is proceeding smoothly. On Tuesday and Wednesday of last week we held the second meeting of the integration Steering Committee, which is comprised of Alberto Weisser and Sam Scott, CFOs Jackie Fouse and Cheryl Beebe, and HR heads Jim Hirschak and Vicente Teixeira. At the meeting, integration sponsors and leaders from around the world presented their teams' initial findings and ideas.

Over 50 teams are currently analyzing the best way to integrate our operations on global and regional levels. They are divided into five primary groups—North America; South America; Asia and other regions; Global Growth; and General & Administrative—and are working on topics such as distribution, IT, marketing, procurement, legal, R&D, HR and finance. The size and specific activities of the teams vary depending upon their location and focus, but each has the same underlying goal: identifying the approaches and ideas that will produce efficiencies and accelerate the growth of our combined businesses.

Our confidence in the strategic value of combining Bunge and Corn Products has only grown stronger as we have proceeded with integration planning and have had the opportunity to hear the talented teams in our organizations discuss the growth potential in their regions, the ideas they have for product innovation and improved customer offerings, as well as the opportunities that will be available for employees.

Our goal is to conduct the integration carefully, correctly and candidly. This week's meeting provided the Steering Committee with a chance to review progress, discuss ideas and offer input. No final decisions were made. Additional Committee meetings are scheduled for October and November. We expect to have a clearer sense of the timetable for major decisions after these sessions. We will keep you posted.

So where does the process stand today, and what can you expect in the coming months?

First, we expect to hold our shareholder meetings in mid to late November, and close the merger shortly thereafter.

On the day of the closing, Corn Products will become part of Bunge. Corn Products stockholders will become Bunge shareholders, and Corn Products' financial results will be consolidated into Bunge's. Alberto Weisser will be the combined company's chairman and CEO, and Sam Scott will join Bunge's Board of Directors. At the same time, key functions—legal, finance, HR and some commercial teams, for example—will work together closely to ensure that essential activities like financial reporting, payroll and customer contacts are handled smoothly.

Beyond these changes, we do not expect many significant, near-term changes to our day-to-day operations. Most of the integration plans in development will be implemented in the first half of 2009.

This process requires the focus of many people and will take a considerable amount of effort to complete. We thank everyone who is involved on a day-to-day basis and all others who are contributing their time and thoughts. The integration of our two companies is important work, but as we move ahead, let's continue to keep our customers and businesses foremost in our minds.

Included with this letter is an FAQ document. We hope it addresses some of the questions that you may have. If you have other questions, please send a note to askBunge@Bunge.com.

Best regards,

Alberto Weisser, Sam Scott
