

Bunge/Corn Products

Employee Q+A

1. What are the benefits of this transaction?

- This transaction will create a stronger company with an integrated, global presence in the corn value chain, enhanced product offerings, an expanded presence in important growth geographies and a diversified revenue stream.
- Bunge and Corn Products are both leaders in their market segments. By combining the two companies, we have the opportunity to develop new customer relationships and strengthen existing ones by offering a broader product portfolio and by integrating distribution.
- The goal is to create a larger, stronger and more diverse company with more opportunities for the enterprise and our employees.

2. Don't we already have a large corn milling business? How will it be affected?

- Bunge and Corn Products both participate in the corn value chain, but in complementary businesses.
- Bunge is an originator and exporter of corn and operates a corn dry milling business in North America. Corn Products is a leading global refiner of corn using a wet milling process that produces sweeteners, starches and co-products like refined corn oil and corn meal and gluten.
- Both companies serve customers in the food processor, brewing, confectionary, bakery and animal feed industries, so there will be opportunities to deepen our relationships with current customers and gain new ones.

3. What is the plan for integrating the two companies?

- An integration team will be formed to study the best way to integrate Corn Products' operations into Bunge.
- We have done this many times before, on large and small scales, and, as in the past, we will consider all decisions in a thorough, fair and transparent manner and keep employees informed throughout the process.

4. How will the transaction impact our current operations? How will it affect my job?

- There will be no immediate impact.
- Corn Products's operations complement Bunge's existing businesses. So looking ahead, we will see improvements in certain areas. Some areas will not be affected by the combination as greatly.

Bunge/Corn Products

- Employees should continue to move forward with the goals that we have set for the year including continuing to improve safety and productivity, building our customer relationships and growing our core businesses.

5. Will any of our operations be moving? Will I have to relocate?

- Corn Products and Bunge both have strategically placed their assets to support their businesses. The integration team will assess our joint operations and make suitable recommendations.

6. Will jobs be cut once the companies are combined?

- Corn Products's operations complement rather than overlap Bunge's existing businesses, so we anticipate few job cuts in field operations.
- It may be necessary to eliminate some administrative positions where duplicate responsibilities exist. We will treat all affected employees fairly and in accordance with local customs and regulations.
- As we work through the integration process, we will have a clearer understanding of staffing needs. In keeping with our core value of openness and trust, we will inform employees of integration efforts and decisions regarding jobs in a timely manner.
- Additionally, it is important to keep in mind that we are a global company that is rapidly growing, and we may have job opportunities in other businesses.

7. How will this affect my compensation and benefits? (401K, health, equity incentives, pension, time off)

- There will be no immediate changes to your benefits package. Bunge and Corn Products offer their employees competitive benefits packages, and the integration team will carefully review both before making any recommendations. We will communicate any decisions to employees once they are made.

8. Will this transaction create job growth or result in a hiring freeze?

- We will continue to staff our operations as needed, looking for the best qualified candidates internally, then externally.
- Combining the two companies builds a stronger, more diverse company, so we anticipate growth opportunities for employees in both companies.

9. Did Bunge alert my union leadership about this acquisition? Will Bunge honor our current union contracts?

- We are following appropriate protocols with unions and workers' councils on all continents, and will honor our current union contracts.

10. How will this affect my customers? What should I tell them?

- In the near-term, there should be no changes to our daily operations or our customer relationships.
- Ultimately, we believe the combined company will provide our customers with a stronger business partner that can efficiently provide a wider variety of products and services.
- You can tell them that it is business as usual at Bunge and that we will keep them informed of any changes that may affect them.
- Your manager or your regional communications department can help you with any specific customer questions. You can also send questions to AskBunge@Bunge.com.

11. Will Corn Products and/or its subsidiaries change their brands?

- The plan is to keep our brands as they are.

12. Will Corn Products still maintain its operational headquarters outside of Chicago?

- Yes, Corn Products will maintain its operational headquarters in Westchester, IL.

13. What happens if the transaction doesn't close?

- With Bunge's established track record of successfully completing disciplined acquisitions to strengthen our company, we fully expect the transaction to close.
- If, for some reason it does not, Bunge would continue to build on our success in our existing businesses and look for additional opportunities that complement our current product offerings.

14. May I talk to friends or former colleagues I have at Corn Products?

- For now, Corn Products and Bunge remain separate companies and, as such, employees at Bunge and Corn Products should talk to one another only in the normal course of business or otherwise at the specific direction of the integration team.

15. Where can I go with specific questions and concerns?

- You can direct specific questions and concerns to AskBunge@Bunge.com. You can also ask your manager or supervisor. If he or she cannot answer your question, it will be forwarded to the integration team.
